Description: This course is designed to give students a broad overview of the public policymaking process, the primary theories and concepts for analyzing public policy, and a survey of critical issues in different public policy areas. First the course provides an introduction to theories of the policy process and some of the key contextual aspects of the American political system that serve to influence policy formulation and implementation. Second, the course offers discussion of the debates about how to best analyze public policies emphasizing the key differences between economic and political approaches. Third, the course examines a number of different policy areas. When examining these policies, we will be concerned with using our theoretical tools for understanding the policy process and how to best analyze policy in each area. We will also be concerned with the substantive details of these policies, including both the current policies adopted by government, and as well important alternative (proposed) policies that have yet to be adopted nationwide. Finally, we will attempt to arrive at some conclusions about the effectiveness and efficiency of the policies we will be studying and what can be realistically done to improve public policy in current period given the current political climate and the prevailing orientation to approach public policy solutions. Students will write reaction papers in response to the readings and a term paper focusing on an issue of public policymaking and analysis in a selected substantive area.

Learning Goals: The course is designed so that each student will have opportunity to:

1) improve critical thinking skills, including the capacity to grasp abstract concepts and theories regarding U.S. public policy;
2) develop a facility for using these abstract concepts and theories to deepen understanding of the facts of specific policies;
3) learn to use those facts to evaluate the validity of empirical claims about policy;
4) reconcile conflicting evidence and contrary positions about various policies, especially as expressed in the literature but also in public discourse;
5) improve public speaking skills and engage with others more reflexively in public policy debates; and
6) enhance writing skills, including in particular the ability to summarize the main points of arguments succinctly, explain theories clearly, use language precisely, demonstrate command of social science terminology related to public policy, and in the course of writing use abstract theories and concepts to deepen understanding of evidence for assessing public policies and alternatives.

Required Texts:

Course Requirements:

Mid-Term Exam 20%
Final Exam 30%
Policy Analysis Paper, 8-10 pages 30%
Class Presentation 10%
Overall Class Participation 10%
TOTAL 100%

Mid-Term and Final Exams: The exams will ask students to apply ideas from the required texts to address specific issues raised in the articles assigned in the course outline. Class discussions will give students a chance to work on their applications of the required texts to the assigned additional readings. The exams will be take-home. Exams should be typed, doubled-spaced, completed using Microsoft Word and submitted via email.

Policy Analysis Paper: Students should choose a topic by mid-semester. Each student must meet with the instructor to discuss the topic. The paper must focus on one or a number of key concepts from the course to analyze a specific policy (proposed or enacted, past or present, national or local), in any number of areas such as global warming, economic growth, homeland security, abortion, etc. Students make a 10 minute in-class presentation about their term paper. The final paper should be 8-10 pages, typewritten, double-spaced and is due Monday of the final exam period.

Overall Class Participation: Class attendance is required. Students should be on time for the start of class. Your participation grade will be determined in three ways: (1) attendance; (2) discussion of the readings and (3) discussion of the reaction papers. More than three unexcused absences result in a reduction of the final grade.

Late Assignments and Make-Up Exams: The following are acceptable reasons for excused absences and late assignments: 1) serious illness; 2) illness or death of family member; 3) school trips; and 4) major religious holidays, and 5) other circumstances found by the instructor to be "reasonable cause for nonattendance." When there is an excused absence, students will be given the opportunity to make up missed work and/or exams. It is the student's responsibility to inform the instructor of the absence, preferably in advance of the missed class. The burden of proof is on the student to provide sufficient documentation regarding the nature of the absence.

Academic Integrity, Cheating and Plagiarism: It is assumed that students in this course will work independently and that all work submitted for a grade is the work of that student. I consider the violation of this policy (including plagiarism) to be a very serious offense and will pursue any offense to the full extent permitted by the university.

Respect: Please do not talk to your neighbor during my lectures or when one of your colleagues is speaking. I realize you might occasionally miss a point in the lecture and might ask your neighbor what was said, and that is fine. What I will not tolerate is habitual gabbing while others are speaking.
